Jackson plays host to third ESPY

By Jacqueline Cutler
Tribune Media Services

Anyone can look cool in black leather. Samuel L. Jackson can look cool in golf togs.

On screen he brings intensity to a Bible-spouting hit man, a Jedi knight and a crackhead so convincingly that some thought Spike Lee cast a real junkie in "Jungle Fever." Jackson can level a stare that would frighten a dead man and still harness that rage into a beautifully controlled performance.

He brings his coolness and intensity — along with a love of sports — to ESPN at 8 p.m. Wednesday, July 10, when he hosts "The 10th Annual ESPY Awards." "I watch enough junk sports," Jackson says, "that I know what's going on in cricket."

Hosting the show for the third time, he says, "gives me a chance to get up close and personal to people I watch all the time. And it gives me a chance to say the little things I say when I am at home. I can be a sports fan for a moment and get out there and have some fun and introduce the guys. It is kind of fun. It's a mutual admiration society."

Trained as a stage actor, working live doesn't faze him. Considering Jackson has been through much of what life has to throw at someone, little would faze him.

Jackson finds being a father and husband more challenging than any of his more than 100 film roles. "Everything is pretty unpredictable there," he says.

Williams revisits roots on Broadway

By John Crook
Tribune Media Services

At his personal half-century mark, Robin Williams easily could rest on his laurels as a movie actor, which include acclaim for his recent thriller "Insomnia," an Academy Award for "Good Will Hunting" (out of four nominations) and four Golden Globes (for "Good Morning, Vietnam," "Aladdin," "The Fisher King" and "Mrs. Doubtfire," out of nine movie nominations).

Instead, the 50-year-old actor has returned to his roots in stand-up comedy in a national tour that includes "Robin Williams: Live on Broadway," an HBO special premiering Sunday, July 14.

Williams says he wanted to get a fresh sense of what the country was talking and laughing about, especially after twin tragedies in September 2001: the terrorist attack on the World Trade Center, immediately preceded by the death of his mother.

"I was at the Mark Twain Awards in Washington about a month after 9/11, honoring Whoopi Goldberg, and the mood of the people there was just remarkable. I mean, it was like the lifting of a siege," he recalls. "The response was, like, 'Thanks, God, we needed that,' because we all had been aware of that tension on some level, but maybe not on such an emotional, gut level.

"Most of us had been walking around in a state of shock for about a month or six weeks, and I think maybe being there that night, seeing people laugh and start talking more freely again, may have been the trigger that made me think, 'It's time to go out there again.'"

Story lines adjust with pregnancies

By Jay Bobbin

Tribune Media Services

Two of its stars are pregnant and one of its characters just had a baby.

Yes, the times are a-changing on "Sex and the City," but not so much that fans won't recognize the series.

Starting its fifth season at 8 p.m Sunday, July 21, the spicy, Emmy-winning HBO comedy's focus is staying firmly on close friends Carrie, Miranda, Samantha and Charlotte (Sarah Jessica Parker, Cynthia Nixon, Kim Cattrall, Kristin Davis). Both Parker and Nixon are expecting babies this year; the series' new season has been shortened to eight episodes due to Parker's pregnancy, so expect jam-packed story lines.

The premiere finds Carrie in a new love affair — with New York. Inspired by the energy of the city, she prepares to publish a collection of her newspaper columns. Miranda and sometimes-boyfriend Steve (David Eigenberg) adjust to parenthood, and Samantha debates whether to forgive high-powered hotelier Richard (James Remar) for bedding another woman. Charlotte re-enters the dating game full-throttle after putting the coda on her marriage to Trey. Molly Shannon ("Saturday Night Live") joins the cast as Carrie's editor, and Ron Livingston ("Band of Brothers," "The Practice") will play Carrie's next romantic interest.

As a producer of "Sex and the City," Parker says she knew her pregnancy wouldn't be worked into the series. She was, however, concerned about the effect it would have on the shooting schedule, the crew and HBO. "It was fairly disruptive for some people," she says, "yet I felt very supported and protected."

Hodgkin's disease doesn't stop actor

By Kate O'Hare

Tribune Media Services

Family is all-important on The WB Network's "7th Heaven" — which centers on a Protestant minister, Eric Camden (Stephen Collins); his wife, Annie (Catherine Hicks); and their brood — and that goes for the family behind the camera as well.

Shortly after the airing of the Monday drama's sixth season finale last spring, in which eldest son Matt (Barry Watson) was the groom in an interfaith wedding, it was announced that Watson had been diagnosed with Hodgkin's disease, a form of lymphoma, a cancer of the lymph system. He is undergoing treatment, and apparently the prognosis is optimistic.

Since Watson had not signed on to act in the show's seventh season, which begins this fall, Matt and his new wife, a Jewish woman named Sarah (Sarah Danielle Madison), were packed off for Matt's first year of medical school.

Series creator and head writer Brenda Hampton (with Sue Tenney) decided she didn't want to let Watson go that easily.

"It's so sad!" she says of Watson's diagnosis. "But we made him a writer. I brought him up here, and I put him on the writing staff. I'm serious. I made him a story editor. He's up here; he's working; he's breaking stories with us and drafting things out from outlines, like the other young writers do. He's going to be working with us this season."
